Operations of Two Strong Parties With Opposing Interests Work to Mutual Advantage,

LEADERS BALK AT ADVANCE

Attitude of Reserve Toward Active Speculation Attributed to European Trouble.

NEW YORK, October 13.—There appeared to be some conflict of purpose between at least two strong parties in the speculation to-day, although their operations tended to some mutual advantage. In the one case the support of prices against pressure, without any attempt to bring about an advance, seemed to meet the desired object. In the other case there was an aggressive marking up of prices which following in the market. The lifting process was almost wholly confined to groups of low-priced railroad and industrial stocks, in many of which there are important or dominant holdings by identical interests.

Their starting upwards served as a check rather than a stimulation to a thory of stiength in the general market. The usual leaders of the market showed resistance to the reaction but seemed to balk at attempts for an active advance. The attitude of reserve thus indicated towards present active speculation was ascribed to a remnant of apprehension regarding the political outlook in Europe, to some contraction in money market supplies and to purpose to await the passing of the coming election. Money on call commanded a maximum rate higher than at any time last week, while bank loas were in process of rapid expansion to take up foreign sales of securities. Foreign operations in the stock market were not important today. There was an easing of discount rates to-day in London and Paris. The threatened reopening of the labor dispute in the English cotton mills was an unsatisfactory development, and caused a decline in the-price of cotton. The hesitating ione of stocks persisted turoughout.
